Coe's response: "It is ostensibly a clean sport. We have our challenges. Nobody sitting at this table or in the body of the hall would deny that. And it's a challenge that every global sport faces, but there is nobody of significance in my sport who does not have a nonnegotiable view about maintaining a clean sport. Can it be cleaner? I hope so. Are there things we can do differently in the future? I dare say so."

Coe then defended the sport's efforts to date, later explaining that he would explore the idea of a new "integrity unit" for track and field. It could contain "an antidoping operation with greater independence" with access to a new independent tribunal. Coe's response: "It is ostensibly a clean sport. We have our challenges.
