
Tired of hefty monthly payments to cable or satellite companies that give you too much repetition and little choice in the channels you can get? Why pay for something that is mostly available for free and perfectly legal?

There are a few advantages to having free TV, aside from the huge cost savings that can amount to several thousand dollars over a short number of years.

One, you will be able to get some channels completely unavailable by either cable or satellite service. These are mostly US stations that the CRTC does not allow cable companies to deliver to Canadians.

Two, you will be able to receive, full time, US signals unadulterated by your supplier, as required by the CRTC. This means uncensored and uncut. You may or not be aware that if a Canadian channel is showing the same program as on an US station, the Canadian channel is substituted (censored) for the US one, usually without you even being aware of it. This would be relatively OK, except that the Canadian stations are allowed more advertising time per hour than US ones, and they use it, meaning they cut out some of the program to fit in the extra ads. Ever feel you must have missed something because you suddenly don't know what is going on in the program? Well, now you know why.

With free TV, one may watch the US station, and follow the program better and watch fewer ads.

If you are a satellite subscriber, you know that you can't receive many or most of your local stations, and an antenna (or cable) is needed for these stations. You can and should have both, and this site will guide you.

If you are a PBS fan, you may appreciate having a satellite carried PBS station (Detroit) plus Buffalo's WNED available to you full-time, plus up to four others during optimal reception periods. That gives you a total of 6 PBS stations!

This site has been set up as a disservice to those Canadian cable monopolies who have deliberately kept Canadians in the dark as to how they could get a large number of TV channels without subscribing to cable, and who have gouged consumers for years with inflated prices and such despicable practices as negative option billing.

We'll take you through a brief educational exercise so that you can be soon watching up to 50 channels for a small initial investment, with no monthly payments ever again.
