Cobblestone Charm in Olde City at The Castings. There aren't many cobblestone streets around and at The Castings you have the most precious. Your new home is at The Castings. A unique building whose exterior presents turn of the century (20th) charm with interior contemporary design. Bread Street is really a cobblestone thoroughfare between Arch and Race and 2nd. & 3rd. The Castings, presently a condominium community, was an industrial property which manufactured shipping parts. Once you enter its spacious lobby the shipping artifacts are prominently displayed and the historic building is carried through the building's courtyard. It's a place where you can find a home, it's a place with all the conveniences and amenities you could want. And I think the best feature is the windows facing south. Light is abundant and it's a place where life is lived. This may be the place for you.

The Castings is convenient. All around there's plenty to do including going to the Alden Theater, art galleries, private retailers, and major cultural institutions like Independence Hall. Philly is a walking town and getting to the other fabulous sights and employment is as easy as can be. Public transportation abounds with buses running along Arch and Market. The subway can take you to University City and 30th Street Station in ten minutes. Access to either The Schuylkill (I-76) or The Delaware (I-95) Expressways is a couple minutes away.
