The online editor/writer will have significant management/strategic and writing/editing roles, as is typical of the broad responsibilities performed by each member of the magazine's small editorial staff. Specifically, the online editor/writer will (1) conceive, assign, and edit the online contents; collaborate with editorial colleagues on the online and multimedia components of print contents; and supervise all aspects of online production and presentation (in close coordination with editorial colleagues, including the online assistant editor and art director); (2) direct editorial aspects of online strategy and reader engagement; (3) report and write a significant volume of high-quality, contextual, explanatory articles across the spectrum of readers' interests; (4) coordinate online production of the print contents with technology staff members; and (5) direct the magazine's recurring e-mail products and social-media presence. Candidates must have a liberal-arts bachelor's degree and a minimum of one to three years of professional writing and editing experience, including some management/supervisory responsibilities, both in print and online. Essential strengths include outstanding written, verbal, and interpersonal skills; ability to carry on multiple, overlapping assignments simultaneously; attention to detail; demonstrated ability to work under frequent deadlines, take initiative, set priorities, and work collaboratively in a team environment; and the ability to research, report, and write independently. Must be able to travel and work nights and weekends based on business needs. Applications must include a rÃ©sumÃ© detailing education and work experience, and must be accompanied by samples of published writing exhibiting proficiency on a variety of assignments and the ability to report on the meaning of ideas, research, or scholarly work. Candidates who are invited for interviews will be required to complete writing and editing exercises. Review of applications will begin upon receipt.
