Many years ago my wife and I had a poor meal at this restaurant. Then somebody gave us a $100.00 gift certificate and we were amazed. We later found out there had been a change in management and clearly the new ownership was doing things much better. Prior to last week we had been there many times and were always amazed. We went out to dinner on Friday Oct 9th to celebrate and it was a choice between Starry Nite and Black Sheep. Given our good experience we chose Starry Nite.

Let me tell you. Never again.

We split an appetizer, split a salad, both had an entree, my wife had a martini and it cost us $110.00. The portions were small and nothing to rave about in terms of taste or quality.

Now we wish we had gone to Black Sheep.

If you do not mind paying a lot of money for a little food then go to the Starry Nite restaurant. Me personally, I value my money and want to get something for it.

I am not sure if they are under new ownership again but something not good has.
