For those of you who want to sell or buy the piano on Craigslist -- I can help you in a several ways:

For sellers:

- Appraisal of your piano, so you can set a fair price in your ad and sell the piano faster;
- Tuning: if the piano is noticeably out of tune, it will scare away most potential buyers. For a relatively small fee ($120 for most pianos), you will have a nice-sounding instrument that will appeal to your buyers, and that will justify a higher asking price.
- Fixing minor action problems, like sticking keys, non-working pedals, etc. Again, such problems may turn off an otherwise willing buyer -- which would be a shame, as most such problems have a very easy fix. Usually, I won't charge you for doctoring them: it is a bonus included in the tuning;
- Cosmetic upgrade: your piano will look several hundreds dollars better after a short and cheap ($25-40) cosmetic work;
- All in all, after my work on your piano, you will be able to sell it for a much better price -- usually recouping my service fee several times over.

For buyers:

- Giving you advice on which pianos on Craigslist are worth looking into, and which you should definitely avoid (hint: about 70-80% of them). Many issues are obvious just from the photos and description -- and I will be happy to consult you by phone FREE OF CHARGE!

I will be glad to consult you by phone FREE OF CHARGE! this is a great first step in the process of a used piano purchase. Especially older pianos frequently have hidden problems which are not obvious in untrained eyes. Most of the time for such inspection can cost you a hundred dollars or more in future repairs, or -- if you buy from a piano which is entirely unusable -- the instrument.

- Helping you find a good, "healthy" place for the piano in your house;
  - Tuning your newly purchased piano (a few weeks after you bring it home after the piano has acclimatized);
  - Installing a climate control system, to stabilize tunings and prolong the piano's life;
  - Regulation and other work, if needed.
- If you can not find a piano that you like on Craigslist, I actually may have one for you -- I sell used pianos all over the world. My pianos are already pre-checked, tuned, regulated, cosmetically improved, and -- on
