I acquired these from someone who was moving into a no-pet apartment and weren't able to find a suitable home for them before the deadline. I know very little about them and I'm allergic to them, so they haven't been handled since I took them in a week ago.

Both are males

I was told that they're young - only several months old.

The brindled/mottled one is shy but very sweet.

The grey and white one is outgoing, curious, and can be a punk. He's definitely the leader - he's the first one to come out, first one to get to the food, and overall leads the way for the other guy.

They must go together, as they are social creatures that need to live with a roommate buddy to prevent depression from loneliness.

$20 adoption fee for just the rats.

$80 total if you want the cage, new bag of bedding, large bag of hay, food, and all other.
