

Hello! I'm a local musician who plays guitar, piano, and vocals. Knowing that tribute bands are a really profitable way to go these days, (I was in a Journey tribute band in California and we had constant shows and income) and due to my guitar style being similar to Keith Richards, along with the fact that I'm a big fan of the band, I decided to start a Tribute to the Rolling Stones band.

There are several Rolling Stones Tribute bands in the U.S. but the vast majority are on the east or west coast. Therefore, there is an opportunity to make some extra cash and play some significant shows as fairs, festivals, clubs, bars, etc. with a Rolling Stones tribute band in the Oklahoma/Kansas/North Texas area and possibly even further out later.

This band is just starting out and working out song selection. We'll also be naming the band soon - the name will probably be a Stones song or album. There are three of us currently working on this project, but I'm still looking for any musicians interested, particularly the following:

Drummer who can play in the style of Charlie Watts; if you have a place to practice, that's a huge bonus, because all I have is a mobile home with limited space.

Bass Player who loves the Stones! (There are some interested bass players that have contacted me already, but their time restraints are a bit much...I understand we all have to work to pay bills, but you'll obviously need some free time for rehearsals and shows.)

One radicalist who believes he can change the world is like Mick Jagger and emulates a style that is more than welcome to some, but like with a lot of things, if you're really good, we may have a question whether you should play the guitar instead, you'd have to be really great. That's what we want.

So, feel free to e-mail, text or call me to discuss. I don't have a really ideal place to practice, so I'll hope on that for later. Lastly, if you need musicia
