I don't think even Bruce Springsteen or Eddie Vedder sang any songs about Obama's stimulus and all the clean energy we're enjoying as a result..."

Well, they could sing a song about how it really helped the American people in the midst of a terrible recession caused by the sorts of scum you guys would just let run loose and amok.

When you start complaining about Crony Military Capitalism, then I'll take your concerns seriously.

The post-WWII GI Bill produced an entire generation of engineers, doctors and business entrepreneurs that powered US dominance of the global economy.

Not surprising given that the same generation banded together [generally speaking] to mobilize the national economy against existential threats to our security and economy. Today's generation looks for what benefits themselves, whether it be politics or economic reward, but I repeat myself.
