Indie film to be shot loosely over a period of a few months is seeking two dedicated individuals looking for a cool project with some availability on weekends. This project seeks to work around busy work schedules and is not planning on setting aside a large chunk of days or weeks to shoot. A span of three months should suffice, but it will probably take less time than that. Also looking for a DP willing to participate in some basic preproduction, which will likely be a short series of meetings/conversations as the final shot list is prepared. This preproduction period will not be paid.

During production days, the gig pays $12 an hour plus meals. Gear is a plus, but not critical.

The genre is dark comedy, the project very story/character/conversation driven and the overall tone will be guerilla/stripped down, while seeking to maximize artistic value. Not looking to feature intricate dolly shots and major special effects moves. Just want to tell a cool story with the resources available and to do it with good people passionate about the gig who can facilitate a comfortable environment and bring their killer skills and experience to the table.

Please drop a line with contact info and reel if.
