Do you view the GMAT as an insurmountable obstacle? Have you been disappointed by your GMAT scores after learning from a GMAT coach or after taking a course? I'm certain that this go around you would like to get it right, in order to finally be done with the GMAT. Having said that, I understand that there are various teachers, but please remember that NOT all tutors are the same. In fact a large majority of GMAT teachers work part time while their main concentration is on their every day job or their graduate studies. Unlike those instructors, GMAT tutoring is and has been my full-time job for over eight years. Thus, the success of my students is my primary focus. Furthermore, it is my life's passion to help people succeed.

Because of this, I go above and beyond what is expected from a "usual" tutor to ensure your success. This includes taking calls at late in the evening if you have a question, doing last minute classes on Friday evenings, or even answering texts at any hour of the day.

Furthermore, after years of teaching for the GMAT, I am now very good at my job. I've created strategies for handling problems that help students needing to crack a 620 in addition to strategies for students looking to break a 730. In short, I can help you whatever stage you're at or where you are at in your GMAT journey. I have tons of testimonials to back up my claims and would be pleased to put you in touch with previous students.

Contact me today so we can set up a trial session. Together we can obtain GMAT!
