Due to health issues (ours not the birds) and my husband's job loss, I have to find homes for my 3 birds. This is a tough decision but if I can find a good home for each, I will let them go. There will be reasonable rehoming fee but I am willing to work that out for the right family.

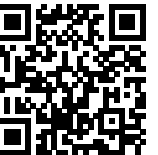

2 of these are rescue birds and are pluckers. Sugar is a very small umbrella cockatoo who plucks her chest. She is very friendly and talks up a storm. The other rescue bird is a blue & gold macaw, Buffett. His original home was very bad and he has never recovered. We had to teach him many bird habits but he is still shy. He loves to interact from a distance and flirts with the girls (from at least a 5' distance).

The last of my companions is Poe, a 4 year old umbrella cockatoo. If he escapes without supervision, he can be very destructive to electronics (keyboards, cords, phones...). He is my biggest talker and takes great pleasure in tormenting my dog (verbally).

None of my feathered companions are aggressive but will have to get to know you before they are friendly.

The big parrots are expensive to maintain so if you can not afford a reasonable rehoming fee, please don't contact me. No, no matter the home I won't let them go for free, so please don't ask.

Sugar's rehoming fee is $300. Buffett's is $250. I have not decided on Poe's yet. That rehoming fee does not include the cage. Buffett can stay on a stand (happily) and I have one that we could work something out on. I have a large 50" HIG cage that I have some of the same. I would be glad to give you more info. I think you might find a perfect home for any of my feathered companions please contact me.
