We got him at approximately 6 weeks old and were told he was a tabby mix. He is definitely not and has taken the form of a maine coon. He has run a muck and seems to be unhappy, very mean to our two female older cats and our 75lb irish wolfhound. I am hopeful that he just needs someone who has the time and energy to play with him for long periods of time, maybe someone with a cat equal or larger in size that will hold it's ground (ours won't stand up to him, yes they're all fixed, including Thor). He is vetted, fixed and microchipped. He will come with those papers. I feed them natural balance cat food, he tends to eat his cat food and then run straight for the dog food bowl and chow down on that too (hence his aggression toward our dog). He is pretty mischievous, likes to steal just about anything small enough to carry and easy enough to tear apart...hats, gloves, sponges, socks, underwear, newborn baby clothes, pacifiers, small toys, utensils from the sink, shoelaces, his own toys, food (if we cook dinner and sit to eat he likes to test his stealth mode and try to steal anything that may remain; his favorites are buttered noodles, hot dogs and pizza crust).

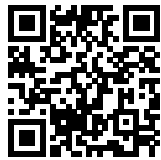

He really is a very sweet loving boy, will cuddle a ton, he would probably make a great outdoor companion for someone. We tried him on a leash and harness over the summer and he was very open to it.

Rehoming fee of $100. Please email, I'm sure I'll have some negative responses even though I'm trying to get him into a home he's happy in, so no phone number.
