QR Code Link to This Post I'm looking for content creator to help me post updates throughout several social media platforms. Experience in social media marketing or marketing in general is beneficial. This opportunity is not guaranteed to provide compensation, but some might be available depending on the success of the content. Experience isn't as important as having someone who is determined to create quality posts. If you have a background in psychology and understand shopping patterns, this might also be a good fit for you. This opportunity would be ideal for people who are still in college, or those looking for experience in the world of online marketing. The entire experience can be done remotely, so where you live does not matter. I'm looking to start working on this project immediately, so please reach out if you're interested!

Since Craigslist is filled with so much spam, I will only reply to people who put the word "Social Media" in the subject.
