QR Code Link to This Post Have you been diagnosed with mania, manic depression, or bipolar disorder and are the parent of a healthy 8-17 year old child?

Parents and their children are needed for a study that explores the brain and emotional predictors of resilience to mood problems in children and adolescents.

The study takes place in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences at Stanford University. You and your child would participate in interviews, your child would do some activities on a computer, and even have a noninvasive MRI scan taken of his/her brain.

Eligible families will be paid for their time. The study will last approximately 6 hours over the course of two visits. We will schedule the sessions around your availability (daytime, evenings, or weekends are all fine).

To be eligible for this study, the parent must:

- **Have been diagnosed with bipolar disorder
- **Have no other neurological conditions

The child must:

- ** be age 8- 17 years old
- ** have no known psychiatric illness
- ** have no braces or metal in his or her body
- ** be a US citizen or non-citizen with a Green Card
- ** read and speak English
- ** have no immediate plans to leave the Bay Area
