QR Code Link to This Post We are running a 5-7 hour at home and in lab psychophysiology study that is designed to examine the body's responses during rest versus more active social tasks, and whether participants' emotional experiences and appraisals predict these responses. The first part will be conducted at home and over the course of 1-2 weeks. It will involve completing short writing tasks and surveys at home along with a few phone calls from researchers (total of 2 hours). The second part of our study is a 1-2 hour lab visit at the Parnassus or Laurel Heights campus of the University of California, San Francisco. Following the lab visit, you will complete a few tasks from home for two days, including brief questionnaires. Then you will come back to the lab and complete some study tasks.

You will be compensated $125 for participating in the study with opportunities to earn more.

Potential risks of participating in this research are minimal, but it is possible that participants will experience anxiety and/or fatigue during the tasks and questionnaires.

Our study is seeking men and women between the ages of 18 and 45 to complete a number of computer and cognition tasks. Throughout the study, you will tell us your thoughts and opinions while wearing various non-invasive sensors (to measure things like blood pressure, heart rate, and movement of your facial muscles).

Must not have pacemaker, doctor-diagnosed heart murmur or hypertension, or be on medication that affects heart rate or blood pressure. Must have transportation to 401 Parnassus Ave, San Francisco or 3333 California Street.

You must be willing to follow the following guidelines on the day of the study:

- Â Do not eat any food or drink dairy products for at least two hours prior to your session.
- Â Do not have caffeine for at least four hours before your session.
- Â Do not exercise for at least two hours prior to your session.

Â Wear comfortable, loose clothing with short-sleeves to your session (no dresses, leotards, or tight shirts)

If you are interested, please email us your name and phone number so we can contact you with a quick survey to confirm.
