QR Code Link to This Post If your employer is contesting your un-employment and you believe you were fired for no reason and would like to appeal that decision, you have 30 days in which to file your appeal and have it post marked before the 30 days are up, do not let your time laps as you will lose your Appeal Rights. You should be Represented by someone that is familiar and experienced in Administrative Law. Trying to represent yourself can be very difficult without the experience or back ground. I have been representing clients in the Administrative Law area and Hearings for 31+ years in Unemployment Appeal's and Petition's for Review. Most Hearings are held over the telephone and contact between the client and myself can also be handled over the phone. If you represent yourself you have a fool for a client. My Fees are reasonable and fair, I only ask for a small non-refundable retainer must be paid prior to any work or notices sent out. If I win you will pay me what we agree on prior to any work preformed, if I do not win you will owe nothing. Please Call and let's talk about your case, Free Telephone
