QR Code Link to This Post I am selling what has to be one of the lowest mile 2009 Toyota Tacomas in the country. It truly was a little old man's truck and was just occasionally driven on a local errand. It's a regular cab Tacoma with the 2.7 L four-cylinder engine and an automatic transmission. Has original paint and has never been wrecked. Very straight body and good paint. Non-smoker and the interior is in like new condition. Has cold air conditioning and a good heater, CD player with an auxiliary input. Runs and drives great, just passed inspection and does not have any mechanical problems at all. Look at the picture where there is a yellow line marked around the center of the tire and wheel. That is a picture where the insurance adjuster made a mark to show the waterline because the truck was issued a salvage title for a water damage claim a couple months ago. It's pretty ridiculous that they pay this off, but it was during the big storm down south and many vehicles got paid off that honestly had no damage at all. The truck literally did not have any water getting inside the cab and nothing was hurt at all. It was honestly like the level that you might pull through a puddle while it's raining. The truck is great and it runs and drives like you would expect and 11,000 mile Toyota to be. Even with the branded title, I put a picture to show the Carfax report gives today $11,600 value but I have market $2100 cheaper than that at $9,500. I'm not interested in lowball offers, so let's save each other sometime if this truck is not in your budget. It's an 11,000 miles one owner Toyota, very rare to find . Call me at 214-six seven five
