President Trump may not like to turn over his tax returns, but with many thanks to an investigation of the Deutsche Bank, the picture of how bad Trump's finances actually are is becoming very clear now.

What's more is that Trump might have aided in Russian money laundering efforts, whether he knew about it or not. There are even suggestions that he violated the Constitution by profiting from his Presidential office and influence.

In fact, Deutsche Bank was found to have received Russian money, laundering it, and then circulating it to clients in New York City and abroad. Trump happens to be one of those clients in NYC.

Now, because of a long history of business failures and bankruptcies, Trump has become a high-risk client for any bank in the USA. Foreign banks however, are more than happy to load him money. His latest financial disclosure certifies that he took out 4 separate loans from Deutsche Bank. Three of those loans were handed out in 2012. The fourth loan was sometime in 2015, just when he began his presidential campaign.

You may wonder just what major project Trump might have had going on around that time? The answer...the renovation of the Washington Post Office into the Trump Hotel, which then opened in October of 2016. And that hotel happens to be one that many foreign dignities having their their meetings in. Trump is profiting from that, and therein lies the violation!

Now, there may be no connection YET to Trump knowingly aiding Russia in the laundering of money, the fact that he employed 6 top advisers with Russian ties, attempted recently to end the Russia investigation, and now has been found to have used a bank that funneled Russian money does not look good at all for Mr. Trump!
