In an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press," Collins said that special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation is clearly making progress and "bearing fruit."

"It's interesting you said bearing fruit," host Chuck Todd noted. "Do you believe that there was collusion? Do you believe that this is where this is headed -- that Mueller is slowly but surely proving his case that there was collusion between the Trump campaign and the Russians?"

Collins' answer was telling.

"We don't know that yet," she said, "but what we do know is that there were conversations during the transition period."

Collins then pointed out that, despite the Trump administration's claims, it was wholly wrong -- and potentially a violation of the Logan Act -- for the transition team to have reached out to Russian officials regarding Obama-era sanctions while President Obama was still in office.

"During the transition period, there is still only one president and that was President Obama, so those conversations should not have ... been taking place," Collins said.
