About Acurian:

Curriculum is a community that includes people for whom research studies you are currently working with provide financial compensation and individuals who are willing to participate in clinical research studies in your area. In a clinical research study, the participants may receive investigation-related product or may receive an incentive or substantial reimbursement, depending on the study. Research participants receive study-related care from a clinical research team for the duration of the study. Research payments will be made for participants and their families for the study.
