

We regularly play gigs. However, to best describe ourselves as a whole, take a look at the video. We like to pull out the sound system and gear and rock out the neighborhood for a fun outdoor practice two or three times a year, as shown here:

 (My garage has pulled in more people on some nights than local establishments that had paid cover bands!)

- A rhythm guitarist (if you play lead or have a desire too, that is an advantage)
- Understands basic guitar tuning
- Can play basic chords and power chords
- Is willing to learn from others and/or teach others
- Has an ear for appropriate levels of distortion
- Is between the ages of 23 - 37 (Negotiable)
- Your own guitar and amp (No fancy stack required; I use a basic combo tube amp that is mic'd through the sound system).
- Location is important. We are all located around Hudson, WI and Red Wing, MN. We practice in Red Wing, MN. A local guitarist is preferred but if you are willing to drive further that is up to you. The string section likes to practice as one occasionally.

was one of that young kid, who, in school, learned to play music through his friends. The friends usually played on my back and I think I was the interested party. I was into learning and I would take lessons. I did play with several friends who still consider me a awesome musician that we used to come in and have children. I never did let them in a child go to the guitar room in the age of 10 (today, my first guitar was a Harmony 3 strings in which I had a cycle 7 in the way of a 10 year old to retire a 10 year old that "KID" always learning and will always learn from other musicians. This is why I play for in a other musician. Musicians NEED to work together and learn from one another.

Over the years I've attempted to join several original bands in the Twin Cities but quickly lost interest. I've turned down several potential guitar positions because I despised one style of music and/or the lead singer's voice. I continued to actively play guitar since - not as a career but because I loved playing guitar. However, one day I run into two musicians whom were looking for a guitar player. As is usual, my first thought was, "okay, let's hear it!" I always had assumed the worst. So I went out of my way to join this band in a rehearsal session. It was pleasantly surprising. Since that day nearly two years ago, I went from a complete stranger to becoming nearly family with 4 other and never knew. That one member of the family is now stepping aside but is still a great friend. We are now looking for his replacement as rhythm guitarist.

We as a band play regularly. Practice varies; once or twice per week. Gigs vary based on schedules. We have no issues booking gigs and there are gigs lined up. We can easily play as a 4 piece but prefer to also have the rhythm guitar. The band also has an available sound system, lighting, and trailer. Everything is set up and ready to go.

If you are that motivated person that likes to play guitar from classic rock, metal, heavy metal, pop rock, (it doesn't really matter, honestly), and you have that drive to learn, can work with others, and play in a cover band, I'd really like to hear from you. Please read the very first section of the basic requirements, though. I can later submit more information to you.
