1. Post a lot of pictures. Craigslist is a resume, but no one wants to read. Pictures are required to quickly and thoroughly communicate what you are good at.
2. Brief points. When someone is looking through craigslist ads it's my experience that no one want to read four or five paragraphs to figure out what they need.
3. Create several unique ads that talk about your unique business. Here, the key is to make sure they're all different. Posting the same ad dozens of times is annoying, and spam. People really don't like it. Instead, post 10 ads that are all different, with different pictures, and focus on different aspects of your business. This allows the customer to select the ad you've customized for them.
4. Post a lot of ads, and I mean a lot of them. If the market you're posting in is saturated with hundreds of ads, you have to accommodate for your business to survive.

I've spent time understanding this whole process and get premium results for my clients with these steps.

I hope this helps.
