QR Code Link to This Post In today's world of basement recordings and bedroom mixes, high-quality audio mastering is more important than ever. An experienced mastering engineer has heard 1000's of records in a precise, familiar room, and will have a fresh perspective on your mixes allowing them to be the best they can be. Mastering is not only your final opportunity to make sure that your record is competitive, it's your last chance to make sure that the vision you have for the music you've worked so hard comes to fruition.

I've always said that there's more than one way to master a record correctly. It really comes down to what flavor you're looking for, or what mood you're trying to convey. I pride myself in helping you get there.

If you have questions about mastering, or would like to talk about how you can get the most out of your recording please let me know.

I'd love to show you why dedicated mastering engineers and studios exist.

In regards to online mastering services,

I've offered this for many years now and thought the time opportune to reiterate.

You can conveniently and easily send your files, along with your song order and contact info to me over the net.

No need to worry about an assistant, or somebody who's learning the art of mastering practicing on your project because you're not here.

I handle all mastering personally, and you'll get the same quality and attention to detail you would in an attended session... without the hassle of leaving your favorite chair.

Have questions? I'd love to talk to you about getting the most out of your music.

Let me show you why dedicated mastering engineers and studios exist.

Thanks

Ryan
