What I am hoping to find is a band who is very close or is already gigging and needs an experienced rhythm/lead guitarist. I am not someone looking to make a living off gigging but just enjoy playing out and making good music with extra "toy" money. Probably weekend work for the most part but open to other opportunities. I am not interested in a complete startup band as it seems in my experience, hard to keep it together to get out and play. I could see being interested in a startup with a talented younger female singer needing a backing band which would be fun to be a part of a new talent.

As for me, I am 57, experienced, can play rhythm or lead depending on the need, have plenty of quality equipment and have been doing this for a number of years. I like a tight band with good vocals and don't need to have a spotlight on me all the time. I am not a shredder but more a melodic lead player for the most part. I play for the song and want to do what is best for the vocals. I DO NOT SING unfortunately (wish I did).

I am open to most genre's of music from blues, pop, classic rock, soul, R&B, and country. Been playing around this area for the last ten years and plan to stay and hoping to find that one tight, harmony driven band that needs a quality guitarist to step in for someone leaving or perhaps just looking to change your lineup. Pretty easy to work with, reliable, do my homework and come prepared to play.

If interested, love to hear from you and talk more about what you might have available. Thanks
