QR Code Link to This Post I'm one of the two main developers on the only private server project for a popular Japanese MMO that went down a year and a half ago. We had our first publicly supported release a couple months back and while progress has been slow and steady, I'd really love to add a talented dev or two to the group. This would not only speed up the development process for me but it is also an excellent source of experience for anyone interested in online game development which could easily lead into gaining a wide enough skill set to be able to make your own game after the project wraps up.

Due to the grey area nature of what is being discussed, I'd like to keep this somewhat vague and brief but I would be more than happy to provide as much detail about the project as you need should you decide to.
