We are running a 2 hour psychophysiology study that is designed to examine the body's responses during rest versus more active social tasks, and whether participants' emotional experiences and appraisals predict these responses. The first part of our study is a 15-minute online questionnaire. The second part of our study is a 1 hour and 45 minute lab visit at the Parnassus or Laurel Heights campus of the University of California, San Francisco.

You will be compensated $70 for participating in the study. Potential risks of participating in this research are minimal, but it is possible that participants will experience anxiety and/or fatigue during the tasks and questionnaires. Participants may also feel slightly uncomfortable answering questionnaires containing sensitive material.

Our study is seeking men and women between the ages of 18 and 45 to complete a number of computer and cognition tasks. Throughout the study, you will tell us your thoughts and opinions while wearing various non-invasive sensors (to measure things like blood pressure and heart rate). Must not have pacemaker, doctor-diagnosed heart murmur or hypertension, or be on medication that affects heart rate or blood pressure.

You must be willing to follow the following guidelines on the day of the study:

- ? Do not eat or drink dairy products for at least two hours prior to your session.
- ? Do not have caffeine for at least two hours before your session.
- ? Do not exercise for at least 2 hours prior to your session.
- ? Wear comfortable, loose clothing with short-sleeves to your session (no dresses, leotards, or tight shirts).

If you are interested, please visit to "Corporate Research Participants wanted remote" . We will contact you with the details of the study and how to complete the study.
