... The city of Lakewood sued the Washington State Department of Transportation in 2013 seeking to halt the project, arguing it had not undergone sufficient environmental review. The city lost its case in part because the law preempts cities and towns from regulating rail lines. "Come back when there is that accident, and try to justify not putting in those safety enhancements, or you can go back now and advocate for the money to do it, because this project was never needed and endangers our citizens," Anderson said.

The city lost its case because Jerks got elected that think they know everything, is my opinion!!!
Jerks elected Jerks!!!! 180 million dollars to save 10 minutes transit time, how utterly stupid!!!!
ODOT in Oregon is just as stupid, if not more!!!
