Last Alien Encounter is a fascinating story of ancient nomadic people who encounter giant aliens from another galaxy after The Last Ice Age. The robotic Cybermen who were sent to Earth was looking for a rare blue crystal in a remote area in North America, now called Absaroka Mountain in Montana. Every evening after sunset, they leave the confines of their spacecraft and work in a cavern. The ancient people who lived close to them revered them and called them Gods from the sky. One day they disappeared, leaving behind a rare blue crystal as a gesture-of-good-will in hopes that it might encourage intelligent humans to benefit from its powers one day.

The story eventually evolves into our timeline and is filled with intrigue, greed and wealthy elitists of the world. It also reveals fascinating alien technology of autonomous systems and devices that are unknown and fascinating to humans, from their flexible graphene sponge spacecraft powered by photon energy to their simple biological lifestyle as a naturalist. For ten thousand years, they developed a great civilization on their planet. They combine nature's biogenesis in all their technology – their ultimate goal is to share this ideology and their technology with the people on Earth – or be disregarded as foolish lifeforms.
